More cities taking measures against rapid grocery delivery services

Four large Dutch municipalities are following Amsterdam and Rotterdam's example and are taking measures against rapid grocery delivery services. The Hague, Groningen, Arnhem, and Amstelveen want to prevent the rapid growth of these fast deliverers from causing problems in the cities, NRC reports after speaking to 27 of 29 Dutch municipalities rapid delivers like Getir, Flink, Gorillas, and Zapp are active in.

“creates a lot of risk, a lot of pressure, and a lot of stress on these workers.”
